PURPOSE OF THE COURSE:

This course is designed to provide graduate students with an overview of local government administration by looking at the issues, skills, and problems faced by local government managers.

The course will review the profession of local government management, ethics, community leadership, essential management practices, implementation of policy, service delivery, external relations and effective local government management. The course will emphasize these issues largely in terms of small to medium-sized council-manager cities, but will also include readings on and comparisons to mayor forms, county governments, and larger communities.

The course assignments, fieldwork, and guest speakers are intended to directly involve students with current local government issues in North Carolina. The theme of the course will be how local government service and professional management can lead to a meaningful and rewarding career that involves balancing the challenges and competing interests of citizens, elected officials, special interests, staff and other governments with professional values and expertise.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS:

Students are expected to attend and participate in each class. Class discussions will be based on the readings, supplemental materials and personal experience. Please let the instructor know in advance if an absence is unavoidable. Incompletes and late assignments will not be accepted without the instructor's prior knowledge and permission.

Final grades will be based on a group project (written report and oral presentation), written executive reports, class presentations, class participation and a possible mid-term exam.

Team Fieldwork Project: The class will work on a field research project for a local government department, likely from the City of High Point, in teams of three to five individuals. The team will work with an agency liaison on the assignment, produce a written report, and make an oral presentation on the project. The same grade will be assigned to all team members. An evaluation from the liaison will form part of the grade, and additional points will be distributed based on the evaluations of other team members.

This project will encourage students to connect their academic learning about administration with an applied research assignment that requires them to interact with city administrators.

Individual Class Presentations and Executive Reports:
A one to two page written report will be due February 18, providing an executive summary of a session that you attended at the North Carolina City & County Managers Conference in Raleigh on February 4th and 5th. This paper should give a summary of the key points addressed in the session and an evaluation of the importance of this issue to local government managers. Each student should be prepared to present a brief oral synopsis of their chosen session in class.

A second report (up to 2 pages) will be prepared on an assigned service or program selected by the student. This paper will look at the defining a typical mission statement for the program or service along with appropriate objectives and performance measures. The intent of this paper is to be able to identify the critical elements that will determine the success of a particular program or service. This paper will be shared with all class members and the student should be prepared to give a brief oral synopsis of the report in the assigned class.

A third report required during the semester (April 1st), will be an analysis from an instructor approved public meeting of the interactions between various local government officials participating in the meeting. This intent of this assignment is to focus on the roles played by various local government officials as they interact in a public meeting. The written report should be no more than a two page executive summary.

These assignments encourage students to learn from each other, to integrate learning from various sources, and to improve one's oral presentation and professional writing skills.
