American Interest Group Politics

Public participation is an important component of contemporary politics and policy making. This class critically engages students with theories and debates that surround concepts of participatory politics and its impact on policy and public opinion. We will be particularly concerned with the social and political context of group politics, focusing on basic questions such as: what conditions facilitate or hinder the emergence of interest groups? how are interest groups organized? why and how do people join these groups? how do activists choose tactics and strategies? and, how does group politics affect social and political change? In order to answer these questions in concrete terms, students will conduct research on political groups and provide presentations of their findings to the class.

Learning Objectives
Students will learn to:
- Assess and evaluate existing theories about activism and political participation
- Conduct original research on group politics
- Synthesize and organize information for oral and written presentation

Course Requirements
Students are required to complete:
1). A midterm examination (20%)
2). A ten to fifteen page paper based on an organization that you research (20%).
3). An oral presentation to the class based on interest group research (15%)
4). In-class presentations and debates (10%)
5). Quizzes (10%)
6). Assessment of Presentations (5%)
7). Final Examination (20%)

Speaking Component
Because a speaking-intensive course focuses on learning of content through active engagement in oral communication, the class will be interactive. You will be encouraged to share ideas, argue viewpoints, and engage in meaningful discussion. Individual improvement is a key component in the course. You will learn to analyze and evaluate your skills and set goals for improvement. You will receive constructive feedback from your instructor and peers.

Resources to Help with Presentations
The University Speaking Center is designed to help you improve your oral communication skills. You have the opportunity to practice your individual or group presentations and work with a trained consultant. The Center is located in 3211 HHRA Building. To schedule an appointment, call 256-1346. They also have a webpage with links to articles and other reference materials, www.uncg.edu/cst/speakingcenter
Required Texts
The following texts are available from the UNCG bookstore or on-line.

Christopher Buckley, Thank You for Smoking. (The novel upon which the movie is based. This book is readily available at bookstores, libraries, and on-line book sellers, and the UNCG bookstore).

Additional readings are available through electronic reserve or Canvas.

Honor Code:
I expect all students in this course to abide by both the letter and spirit of the university’s academic integrity policy. Violations of the university honor code will be prosecuted. The full text of the Academic Integrity Policy can be viewed at: http://www.uncg.edu/reg/Policy/HonorPolicy.html.

A fundamental tenet of all educational institutions is academic honesty; academic work depends upon respect for and acknowledgment of the work and ideas of others. Misrepresenting someone else's work as one's own is a serious offense in any academic setting and it will not be condoned. Academic misconduct includes, but is not limited to, providing or receiving assistance in a manner not authorized by the instructor in the creation of work to be submitted for academic evaluation (e.g. papers, projects, examinations and assessments - whether online or in class); presenting, as one's own, the ideas, words or calculations of another for academic evaluation; doing unauthorized academic work for which another person will receive credit or be evaluated; and presenting the same or substantially the same papers or projects in two or more courses without the explicit permission of the instructors involved.

A student who knowingly assists another student in committing an act of academic misconduct shall be equally accountable for the violation, and shall be subject to the sanctions and other remedies described in The Student Code. Violations of the university honor code will be prosecuted.

Etiquette

During class sessions, I do not check my cell phone for messages, walk out of the room to take calls, text message, surf the Internet, check my email, go get something to eat from the vending machine, and neither should you.

During class, computers may only be used for taking notes. Students who plan to use computers during class need to charge their computer battery before class and must sit in the first row of seats.
